Trump to award Tiger Woods the Presidential Medal of Freedom

Tiger won his fifth Masters and 15th major title on Sunday.

President Donald Trump on Monday said he would award Tiger Woods the Presidential Medal of Freedom after the golfer won the Masters for the fifth time on Sunday.

"Spoke to @TigerWoods to congratulate him on the great victory he had in yesterday's @TheMasters, & to inform him that because of his incredible Success & Comeback in Sports (Golf) and, more importantly, LIFE, I will be presenting him with the PRESIDENTIAL MEDAL OF FREEDOM," Trump tweeted.

The victory on Sunday was one of the greatest comebacks in sports history, as the 43-year-old ended an 11-year major title drought having overcome personal and professional setbacks including a highly public divorce and multiple surgeries.

at Augusta National led to an outpouring of support from sports greats and politicians including Trump.

Trump, an avid golfer, and Woods have played together in the past including in February, when the pair joined golf great Jack Nicklaus for a round at Trump National Golf Club in Jupiter, Florida.

Trump appeared to follow the action at this year's Masters closely, tweeting well-wishes to the field on Saturday and encouraging people to tune in when Woods had the lead with just two holes left to play on Sunday.

"Congratulations to @TigerWoods, a truly Great Champion!" Trump tweeted shortly after Woods sank a short putt to secure his 15th major title.

"Love people who are great under pressure. What a fantastic life comeback for a really great guy!" he added later.

The medal is the highest civilian honor in the United States and is given annually to people who have made outstanding contributions to the security or national interests of the country, to world peace, or to cultural or other significant public or private endeavors.

Since taking office Trump has given the award to several athletes including former professional NFL players Roger Staubach and Alan Page and late professional baseball player George Herman "Babe" Ruth Jr.

Trump calls Omar 'out of control' in latest attack

President Donald Trump attacked Democratic U.S. Rep. Ilhan Omar as an "out of control" purveyor of "hate" speech on Monday before leaving for a visit to the state the Muslim American represents in Congress. Writing on Twitter, Trump blasted both Omar and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi for defending Omar after he tweeted a video on Friday suggesting Omar had been dismissive of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

"Before Nancy, who has lost all control of Congress and is getting nothing done, decides to defend her leader, Rep. Omar, she should look at the anti-Semitic, anti-Israel and ungrateful U.S. HATE statements Omar has made," Trump said. "She is out of control, except for her control of Nancy!" Omar said on Sunday evening that she had experienced "an increase in direct threats on my life — many directly referencing or replying to the president's video." REUTERS

'GoT' premiere draws record 17.4M US viewers

Some 17.4 million Americans watched the first episode of the final season of television's "Game of Thrones" — a record audience for the medieval fantasy series, cable channel HBO said on Monday. HBO said Sunday's broadcast audience, including on its HBO GO and HBO NOW apps, exceeded the previous series high of 16.9 million viewers for 2017's season 7 finale. On social media, Sunday's premiere was also the most-tweeted-about episode of the show ever, with more than 5 million tweets, and 11 million mentions throughout the course of the weekend, HBO said in a statement. All of the top 10 global Twitter trends late Sunday evening were about the episode. The series set among warring families in the fictional kingdom of Westeros, which began in 2007, has become HBO's biggest hit. Season 7 averaged 32.8 million viewers per episode when delayed viewing was counted. REUTERS

Ex-Gov. Weld to seek 2020 Republican nomination

Former Massachusetts Gov. William Weld announced his candidacy on Monday to challenge President Donald Trump for the 2020 Republican presidential nomination. "In these times of great political strife, when both major parties are entrenched in their 'win at all cost' battles, the voices of the American people are being ignored and our nation is suffering," Weld said in a statement. "It is time for patriotic men and women across our great nation to stand and plant a flag. Weld, 73, enters as a long-shot candidate against an incumbent president who has remained popular within his party. Weld in February had said that he planned to challenge Trump. Trump's campaign raised more than $30 million in the first quarter of 2019, it said on Sunday, far outpacing the sums raised by individual Democratic candidates during that period. REUTERS

Paris' iconic Notre-Dame Cathedral gutted by fire, but structure saved

The risk of an interior collapse remained a possibility.

A massive fire consumed Notre-Dame Cathedral on Monday, gutting and destroying the roof of the Paris landmark and stunning France and the world, but firefighters said they had saved the shell of the stone structure from collapse.

Flames that began in the early evening burst rapidly through the roof of the centuries-old cathedral and engulfed the spire, which toppled, quickly followed by the entire roof.

As it burned into the evening, firefighters battled to prevent one of the main bell towers from collapsing. One firefighter was seriously injured.

"We now believe that the two towers of Notre-Dame have been saved," Paris Fire chief Jean-Claude Gallet told reporters at the scene. "We now consider that the main structure of Notre-Dame has been saved and preserved."

There was still a risk that some of the interior structures could collapse, and firefighters would work overnight to cool them down, he said.

Distraught Parisians

and stunned tourists gazed in disbelief as the inferno raged at the cathedral, which sits on the Ile de la Cite, an island in the River Seine, and marks the very center of Paris.

Thousands of onlookers lined bridges over the Seine and along its embankments, held at a distance by a police cordon.

World leaders expressed shock and sent condolences to the French people. President Emmanuel Macron said the whole nation was distressed. "Like all our compatriots, I am sad this evening to see this part of all of us burn," he tweeted.

A huge plume of smoke wafted across the city and ash fell over a large area. People watching gasped as the spire folded over onto itself and fell into the inferno.

Firefighters battled smoke and falling drops of molten lead to salvage priceless artworks and relics.

A centuries-old crown of thorns made from reeds and gold and the tunic worn by Saint Louis, a 13th-century king of France, were saved, Notre-Dame's top administrative cleric, Monsignor Patrick Chauvet said. But firefighters had struggled to take down some of the large paintings in time, he said.

The Paris prosecutors' office said it had launched an inquiry into the fire. Several police sources said that they were working on the assumption for now that it was accidental.

"Everything is collapsing," a police officer near the scene said as the cathedral continued to burn.

Macron, who canceled an address to the nation that he had been due to give on Monday evening, went to the scene of the blaze and talked to officials trying to contain it.

The French Civil Security service, possibly responding to U.S. President Donald Trump's suggestion that firefighters "act quickly" and employ flying water tankers, said that was not an option as it might destroy the entire building.

Sparks fill the air as Paris Fire brigade members spray water to extinguish flames as the Notre-Dame Cathedral burns in Paris.

German Chancellor Angela Merkel called the cathedral a "symbol of France and our European culture." British Prime Minister Theresa May said her thoughts were with the French people and emergency services fighting the "terrible blaze."

The Vatican said the fire at the "symbol of Christianity in France and in the world" had caused shock and sadness and said it was praying for the firefighters.

The mayor of Paris, Anne Hidalgo, said at the scene that some of many artworks that were in the cathedral had been taken out and were being put in safe storage.

The cathedral, which dates back to the 12th century, features in Victor Hugo's classic novel "The Hunchback of Notre-Dame." It is a UNESCO World Heritage site that attracts millions of tourists every year.

It is a focal point for French Roman Catholics who, like Christians around the world, are celebrating Holy Week, marking the death and resurrection of Jesus.

The archbishop of Paris called on all priests in Paris to ring church bells as a gesture of solidarity for Notre-Dame.

"I have a lot of friends who live abroad and every time they come I tell them to go to Notre-Dame," said witness Samantha Silva, with tears in her eyes.

"I've visited it so many times, but it will never be the same. It's a real symbol of Paris."

The cathedral was in the midst of renovations, with some sections under scaffolding, and bronze statues were removed last week for work.

Built over a century starting in 1163, Notre-Dame is considered to be among the finest examples of French Gothic cathedral architecture.

It is renowned for its rib vaulting, flying buttresses and stunning stained-glass windows, as well as its many carved stone gargoyles.

Its 330-foot roof, of which a large section was consumed in the first hour of the blaze, was one of the oldest such structures in Paris, according to the cathedral's website.

A center of Roman Catholic faith, over the centuries Notre-Dame has also been a target of political upheaval.

It was ransacked by rioting Protestant Huguenots in the 16th century, pillaged again during the French Revolution of the 1790s and left in a state of semi-neglect. Hugo's 1831 work led to revived interest in the cathedral and a major — partly botched — restoration that began in 1844.

"Notre-Dame belonged to all humanity. What a tragic spectacle. What horror. I share the French nation's sadness."

Jean-Claude Juncker, pres. of European Union's executive Commission

The wood-and-lead spire was built during that restoration, according to the cathedral's website.

"Notre-Dame belonged to all humanity. What a tragic spectacle," tweeted Jean-Claude Juncker, president of the European Union's executive Commission.

"What horror. I share the French nation's sadness." REUTERS

The spy and the lord

Alistair Petrie gave Metro the scoop on his roles in "Deep State" season 2 and "Hellboy."

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Alistair Petrie is having quite the exciting year. On one end of the spectrum his infamously loved character, George White from "Deep State" will be getting a second chance at life, and on the other end, he is transforming into a powerful lord who works side by side with one of the most famous comic book characters of all time in the new "Hellboy" reboot. Petrie sat down with Metro to chat about "Deep State" season 2 (out April 28), the new "Hellboy" film (out April 12) and what to expect overall from both of his vividly distinct characters. George White is quite a polarizing character, how would you describe him? Do you consider him a villain? It's funny, one sort of talks about who's good and who's bad- I think the interesting stuff for me lies in the gray sort of matter in the middle of that. I think my job as an actor is to find the human being really, and then put that human being under this sort of contextual pressure of the piece. I mean there's no question he does some bad things, I think he believes in the great mantra of the so-called greater good and then finds himself disappearing down that rabbit hole trying to sort of answer the question of are you doing this for the greater good? I think he finds ever-more rather depressing ways of answering that positively. Until he sort of crosses the line — he doesn't really understand or know where that line is, he ultimately comes to realize I think that he's crossed it though. But by that time it's a bit too late. What I think intrigued me about him was when we got to see him for a brief time with his family, because it's very easy to just throw on a suit and tie and curl your top lip and invite an audience to hate you for it.

What's in store for George in "Deep State" season 2?

Well, thankfully that was our writer's big challenge — how on earth to bring him back. I always knew it was potentially a one season deal. But I was very keen to work on the show so I was very happy about that- at least to be a part of it at all, let alone multiple seasons with a real story arc. So effectively the show takes place two years before season 1 and concurrently six months afterward, so you could sort of argue it's a semi-origin story — how George White got to the point of where he is in season 1. It's really an extraordinary thing to have to play, because in many ways you're literally going back in time and in season 2, I don't get to play anything beyond what I did in season 1 because I died. So it's sort of a re-discovery somewhat and I was sort of nervous about thinking who is this man that I sort of established? But actually, it was kind of liberating in a way because you're playing someone who hasn't done any of these things from season 1, it's kind of an odd thing to do — normally it never works out that way. That was the fun of it, really. He hooks up with Walter Goggins' character, and they go on what might be termed as an escapade into Mali and that hangs half of the story in season 2.

Would you suggest watching season 1 of "Deep State" before watching season 2? Actually, I'd argue it's not essential, partly because Mark Strong's storyline in season 1 is wrapped up. So I think you can come to season 2 fresh and start it as a stand-alone piece on its own. Which again,

I think is a really fun concept.

You are also in the new "Hellboy" movie, what can you tell me about your character?

My character is a lord of the realm, called Lord Adam Glaren. He is a very senior figure in a sort of occult society called the Osiris Club. In the graphic novels that club, or outfit, was charged with protecting and preserving the balance of the world. So he runs this society with a group of cohorts who have certain. ... well I don't want to say immortality but they certainly live longer than most people.

Were you a comic book fan growing up, or is this a whole new world that you are delving in to? As a child, I was brought up in the Middle East and we didn't have access to television particularly — the world of satellite TV didn't exist in the late '70s. So it was what we could get our hands on, it was comic books initially and then we moved into the world of graphic novels. I wasn't massively aware of "Hellboy," although I started to become laterally aware. There's always an excitement for an actor to bring something so noticeably visual on a page to life. It's obviously hugely different from a novel or a script where you just have words — for this you have images that you can dive into. Audiences absolutely love that. It's tricky because you've got to do it justice and the fan base is so passionate, but equally in a sense, you've got to forget that to try and tell the story that you want to tell while still being imaginative and reverential at the same time.

Would you say this "Hellboy" rendition is darker than Del Toro's versions?

I think it's got the potential to be more so in a way. The team that has made it, and the director Neil Marshall, I think they didn't want to sort of sanitize it. They've been very bold, I mean it's got an R rating, which I think is exciting and it sort of frees you up to tell the story the way you want to tell it and go for it. Let's face it, it wasn't a surprise. I don't think you set out to make a movie with an R rating as a goal, but you look at the material and go well we know what we're going to do so let's go for it rather than having to go well we can't do that. With an R rating, you sort of just say, OK let's do it.

Overall what can "Hellboy" fans expect from the movie?

I think they're going to see something on a scale that Del Toro's didn't necessarily pursue. They've taken the source material and are detonating a story explosion underneath of it. Hopefully audiences will be back for more. They're going to see scale, humor and they will see David Harbour absolutely inhabit the role of Hellboy. He does a phenomenal job and I think it's going to be an absolute spectacle.

Boston crowned new winners in what turned out to be a near-perfect Marathon Monday.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

The 123rd running of the Boston Marathon had a little bit of everything, including sheer dominance in the women's race and a dramatic photo finish in the men's competition.

Ethiopia's Worknesh Degefa could not be denied in the women's field as she was victorious in the route, clocking in at 2:23:31. The second-place finisher, Edna Kiplagat of Kenya, crossed the finish line 42 seconds after Degefa broke the blue ribbon.

"I'm so happy that I won," Degefa told WBZ through a translator. "I was out by myself for most of the race so at the end I was [competing with myself]. I have run so many races but this is the biggest crowd I have ever seen and it was huge. I'll be back ... I hope to be back [racing Boston again]."

The 29-year-old set herself apart early in the race, pulling comfortably ahead around the seven-mile mark.

Des Linden, the 2018 women's marathon winner and the first American woman to win the event in 33 years, finished fifth this year.

"I'll take it," Linden told WBZ. "Anytime you finish in the top five in Boston, you take it."

American Jordan Haysay, of California, placed third with a time of 2:25:20.

Cherono by a hair

Kenya's Lawrence Che-

Lawrence Cherono came away with the narrowest of victories.

rono, Ethiopia's Lelisa Desisa and Kenya's Kenneth Kipkemai were still grouped together in the closing moments of Monday's men's elite race. Desisa made his move as the trio made that famous left on Boylston and looked as though he was about to capture his third Boston crown before Cherono made a dramatic late push in the final 75 yards.

Despite his experience in Boston, Desisa looked as though he pushed too early and Cherono took full advantage with a fantastic late surge, crossing the finish line just two-tenths of a second before the Desisa — the 2013 and 2015 winner — at 2:07:57.

"I am very happy. I did my best today," Cherono told WBZ. "I was so focused. I had never won a major marathon until today. I'm so happy, so grateful. So grateful to the people of Boston. They were so great and cheerful."

Scott Fauble, of Arizona, was the first American male to cross the finish line as he placed seventh with a personal best of 2:09:09.

Wheelchair division

Daniel Romanchuk made the Boston crowd proud by becoming the first American male to win the Boston Marathon wheelchair division since 1993. The 20-year-old Romanchuk is originally from Maryland.

Switzerland's Manuela Schaer captured the crown in the women's wheelchair race. It was her second win at Boston, having won in 2017 as well.

Celtics will need to win more ugly games in playoffs

The Celtics played 23 games in the roller-coaster months of March and February, a stretch in which they beat the Golden State Warriors but also lost four straight games at one point and fell to the lowly Chicago Bulls. During those 23 games, they held their opponent to under 100 points just five times.

Not only did the Celtics hold their opponent under the century mark in their first playoff game of 2019, but Indiana was only able to muster 74 points against the C's in a slugfest of a Game 1. It was the best defensive effort of the season for the Celtics in terms of points allowed, and just the second time since the start of the season this past October that Boston has held an opponent to under 80 points.

In other words, it appears that a switch has indeed been flipped by the Celtics — at least on the defensive end.

"I think that's playoff basketball. It starts on the defensive end," Celtics center Aron Baynes told Celtics.com. "You saw how physical it was out there on both ends. It's about going out there and valuing every possession. You can't take your foot off the gas."

Make no mistake, it surely helps that the Pacers are one of the weakest offensive teams in the league, having ranked 22nd in points per game this season. But for the Celtics to win in the postseason, they will need to win plenty of ugly basketball games.

The C's will look to go up 2-0 on Indiana tomorrow night at the Garden (7 p.m., NBC Sports Boston).

Aries Pick your battles carefully. You have plenty to gain if you are steadfast, industrious and to the point. Keep idle chatter to a minimum and focus on your objective.

Taurus Lessons from the past will help you recognize the possibilities heading your way. Spend time with the people you love and care about most. Romance is highlighted.

Gemini Watch what others are doing. If you are aware of what's going on around you, it will be easier to deter others from manipulating or taking advantage of you.

Cancer Home and family should be your priorities. How you use your time will affect the way someone treats you. Don't take on responsibilities that don't belong to you.

Leo Channel your energy into something constructive to improve your chances to advance. Consider your options and choose the one that is most reliable and affordable.

Virgo Your intuition won't let you down. Follow your heart when dealing with loved ones. Use discipline to offset excessive behavior. Romance will improve your life.

Libra Make choices and stick to your plans. You are best off being secretive until you feel satisfied with what you have accomplished. Don't let criticism discourage you.

Scorpio You don't have to spend money or overdo it to have a good time. Hang out with people who stimulate you intellectually and those who encourage you to be and do your best.

Sagittarius Consider how to best use your skills and experience to combat someone interfering in your affairs. Stay in control, and don't share personal information.

Capricorn Get ready to make your move. Take advantage of an opportunity that will increase your earning power. Don't rely on someone else to do things for you. Take charge and finish what you start.

Aquarius Take the initiative to improve your surroundings. Get involved in activities or joint ventures that can offer equality and high returns for everyone involved. Be wary of anyone making unrealistic promises.

Pisces When in doubt, ask questions and be honest. If you let a situation escalate, someone will goad you into an emotional argument. Stick to the truth, gather facts and be patient. EUGENIA LAST
